INTRODUCTION

THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS of the New England Regional Conference of the National Council for Black Studies would like to thank the Five College Black Studies Executive Committee and Five Colleges, Inc. for making possible this joint issue of Contributions in Black Studies and the New England Journal of Black Studies.

The 1983 issue of the New England Journal of Black Studies will be sponsored by the Rhode Island Black Studies Consortium (Brown University, Rhode Island College, Rhode Island Black Heritage Society, and the University of Rhode Island) and will have as its focus blacks in New England. Meanwhile, next year's Contributions will return to its regular format. For additional information readers should consult the inside cover. Readers are encouraged to support both of these important publications.

The current issue concentrates mainly on economically rooted, race/class topics, with additional articles on music and literature.

CONTRIBUTORS

ROGER N. BUCKLEY is Professor of History and Black Studies and Chair of the Afro-American Studies Program at the University of Hartford. He is the author of Slaves in Red Coats: The British West India Regiments, 1795-1815 (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1979).

MONICA H. GORDON is Assistant Professor of Sociology and Black Studies at Mount Holyoke College. She has written extensively on immigration policy and its impact, especially on women.

THERESA JENOURE is a professional violinist and vocalist with a strong interest in multicultural art education. She has recently served as instructor and artist-in-residence at Hampshire College. Currently a doctoral candidate at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and NEH Fellow, Jenoure also performs with the Leroy Jenkins Ensemble.

JULIUS LESTER is Professor of Black Studies at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. The author of several books, including the classics, Revolutionary Notes and Black Folktales, Lester responds to a review of his autobiography All is Well. The review by Priscilla Ramsey of Howard University appeared in the New England Journal of Black Studies, No. 1.

PAUL L. PURYEAR is Professor of Political Science and Afro-American Studies at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He specializes in the study of political behavior and public policy in black communities. His recent publications include The New Black Politics: The Search for Political Power (with Preston and Henderson).

JOHN C. WALTER is Associate Professor of Afro-American Studies at Smith College where he teaches history courses. Walter has been published widely on Caribbean immigration, and United States political and labor organizations. His most recent article, "Frank R. Crosswaithe and Labor Unionization in Harlem, 1939-1945," appears in the latest issue of the Journal of Afro-Americans in New York Life and History.
